

RMIT and All Graduates team up to strengthen translating & interpreting industry

One of Australia's largest providers of interpreting and translating services, All Graduates, is pleased to announce its new partnership with the RMIT University's Translating and Interpreting department.

The partnership strengthens the 20-year relationship between RMIT University and All Graduates enhancing the scope of training to be provided to All Graduates interpreters and translators and opportunities for RMIT students to be exposed to the best practices in the industry.

"Through a formal partnership, RMIT's Translating and Interpreting Discipline will bring its expertise in quality training delivery, research and experience to support All Graduates' corporate goals and strategic direction to further strengthen All Graduates position as the leader in providing trained and qualified interpreters and translators," said All Graduates CEO Mr Ismail Akinci.

Mr Akinci is excited about the world-first partnership and working with an innovative educational institution, which prepares its graduates with industry-specific skills to deal with the challenges of the work environment.

"Collaborating with RMIT University is a fantastic opportunity for All Graduates to contribute to the development of leaders and professionals in the industry."

"All Graduates will provide RMIT translating and interpreters students access to latest cutting edge high-technology equipment, industry experts and guest speakers to deliver lectures and workshops. Student will also have the chance to visit All Graduates Facilities on course excursions," said Mr Akinici.

As part of the agreement, RMIT University and All Graduates will together to seek opportunities for minor research grants, conference papers and State and National awards. The organisations will work together to gain a better understanding of industry needs and develop initiatives to improve the industry.
